GIVING NEW LIFE TO OLD SONGS

“REFRESHINGLY DIFFERENT” THE IRISH WORLD

“WHAT AN ENCHANTING SOUND THIS GROUP PRODUCES AND WHAT A LOVELY RELATIONSHIP THEY FORM INSTANTLY WITH THEIR AUDIENCE.

SIMPLE AND POWERFUL.” JUDE KELLY (ARTISTIC DIRECTOR, SOUTHBANK CENTRE)

Rún gives new life to old songs. With a repertoire based on four-part harmony interpretations of Celtic songs about one-horned cows, red-haired girls, hayropes and bogeymen, the five-strong group performs a cappella and with Celtic harp. Rún is the Gaelic word for ‘secret, wish or love’.

The London-based lasses took to the stage in 2007 and have gone on to perform at many folk clubs and venues including the Union Chapel, the National Theatre Foyer, the Front Room at the Queen Elizabeth Hall and Camden Irish Centre. In 2009 their summer festival tour took them to Upton Folk Festival, Glastonbury, Lewisham People’s Day, Lovebox and Lambeth Country Show. They have supported a variety of high-profile folk artists including John McSherry, Zoe Conway and Martin Simpson.
